Focus the Conversation.

“You cannot really appreciate the power and magic of Nexus until you use it. It’s not just one thing; it’s everything about it. The two distinct surface areas help separate ideas or discussion topics, whether it be strategic and tactical, or a visual and task lists. I call the tablet my “laptop” — I can sit down with a client and collaborate or share a concept together, then hang it up and use it as a reference when we work on the adjoining big board. All I can say is that this system just flat-out invites collaboration and engagement like no traditional whiteboard or flip chart ever could.”

Collaborate in Open Spaces.

“We love our Nexus boards. With our open office concept, there aren’t many walls for traditional whiteboards. We also end up having lots of impromptu meetings all around the office. Having the boards on wheels allows us to bring them to wherever we are. Our technical folks like to use the tablets for their own personal use, and then bring them to the larger board discussions. We are particularly proud to display our Red Cheetah logo on each board!”

Facilitate Learning.

“I love the flexibility of using the tablets with the easel. I can write on the tablets ahead of time and pull them out as needed to cover different topics. Furthermore, I like the idea of separating the content – having dynamic content on the easel and then always having my main points on the tablet hung from the side of the easel. Nexus definitely helps me effectively facilitate discussion and learning.”

Be Prepared.

“As a consultant, I’m constantly trying to organize everyone’s thoughts and make sure we are making forward progress. To make that easier, I have 3 tablets hanging in my office at all times. They are in full view as I’m drawing conclusions and making recommendations. Then, I like being able to bring my work (on a Tablet) to a meeting and hang it onto the side of the easel or idea wall. It minimizes duplication and keeps us much more organized.”

Steve Coats

Think Green.

“With the Nexus Tablets, I have gone completely paperless in conducting my Leadership Development classes. Each team uses a tablet to record their work and share with the larger group. Then, they erase and start again. We keep our key goals on one side and write and erase on the other. It works great! And, the participants seem very appreciative to be part of an effort that in a small way helps preserve our natural resources.”
